The presentation will focus on the case of a 2-year old female, the youngest person ever to undergo ovarian tissue cryopreservation (OTC). This case raised ethical concerns about the authority of the child's parent to make the decision for OTC on the patient's behalf with the intention that this would ensure the option of biological childbearing in the future.